Family Tree
A Quick Start Guide

Family Tree is the part of FamilySearch.org that displays generations of your family and has information about those people. You can see how the generations fit together. You can also see specific information about an ancestor, like name, family members, vital events, photos, and stories.

Use Family Tree

1. To use Family Tree, go to FamilySearch.org.
2. Sign in with your FamilySearch username and password.
   Tip: If you don't have a FamilySearch account, in the upper right, click Join For Free. Fill out the form. You will be sent an email to verify your email address. In the email, click the link to activate your account.

When you sign in, the system displays a pedigree chart with you in the main position. Your ancestors are on the right. Your descendants are on the left.

Seeing Generations and Information about a Specific Person

In Family Tree, when you click a person’s name, a summary card is displayed. Use the summary card to see different information about the ancestor. This is especially handy when you want to move from seeing generations to seeing information about a specific person.

- To see generations of the person’s family, click Tree.
- To see information about the person, click Person. This takes you to the person’s Details page.
- To see the sources (records that provide information) that have been attached to the person, click Sources.
- To see the photos, stories, and documents that have been attached to the person, click Memories.
Seeing Generations

When you select Tree, you can see different views that show the relationships between multiple generations of ancestors.

Click the View button in the upper-left, and select one of the following views. (If you are on a person’s Details page, click the person’s name, click Tree, and then click View.)

Traditional: This is a horizontal pedigree with a husband and wife listed together with lines that connect them to their parents and their ancestors.

When you first go to Family Tree, your name is in the main (center) position. Your ancestors are on the right. Your descendants are on the left. To move an ancestor to the main position, click the person’s name, and then click Tree. To expand the tree by two generations, click an arrow on the right. To view the couple’s children, other spouses, or other parents, hover your cursor over the couple’s names. Click the arrows that appear.

This view is good for adding new people to Family Tree.
Fan Chart: This is a colorful way to view your ancestors. Children are below; ancestors fan out above. To move a different person into the center, hover near the name, and click the fan chart icon that appears.

This view makes it easy to see where you could add more generations to a family line.

Portrait: This is a vertical pedigree with the pictures of your ancestors that users have added to Family Tree. Click an arrow pointing up to expand the tree two generations. To put a person in the main position, click the person’s name, and then click Tree.

This view helps you connect to your ancestors and makes them real.

Descendancy: This is a vertical list of a person’s descendants. To see a person’s descendants, put the person in the main position. Then to see the spouse and children, click the arrow pointing to the right. If the system identifies possible research or data problems, you will see research suggestions or data problems icons. Click the icon for an explanation.

This view makes it easy to see people in your ancestors’ families who need information corrected or added.

Seeing Information about a Specific Person

The Details and Memories pages show information about a specific person. On the summary card, when you click Person, the system takes you to the person’s Details page.
Family Tree

On the Details page, you can:
- See information about the person, including important events and family information.
- Print forms: pedigree charts, fan charts, and family group records.
- Add people and information to the ancestor’s family.
- Find possible records about the person.
- Add sources to the person.

If you click Memories near the top of the screen, you see the Memories page with all the photos, stories, and documents that users have added for the person.

Add a Person

You can add people to Family Tree. If your tree is empty or if you cannot see your spouse’s ancestors, you probably need to add living parents or grandparents. Then you can search for deceased ancestors and connect them into your tree.

- To add parents, go to the Traditional pedigree. Click Add husband or Add wife.
- To add a child, go to the parent’s Details page (click the parent’s name, and click Person). In the Family Members section, click Add child.
  When you click Add, the Add or Find Person screen is displayed.

- If the person is living, do the following:
  1. Click the Add Person tab.
  2. Enter what you know about the person.
  3. Click Living.

Important: If you do not know that a person is deceased and the person was born in the last 110 years, click Living. After 110 years, you can assume they are deceased.
4. Click Continue. The person is added to Family Tree.

Important: On Family Tree, only you will see the living people you add. This helps protect the privacy of the living people.

- If the person is deceased, do the following:
  1. Click the Find Person tab to see if the person is already in Family Tree.
  2. Add the person’s information, and search for the person.
  3. If you see the correct person in the search results, select the person. If the person is not in the search results, click Not a Match, and add the person to Family Tree.

- To display your spouse’s ancestors in your tree, first add your spouse and any of your spouse’s parents or grandparents who are living. After you have added the living people, add the deceased people. When you add a deceased person, the system will now display that person’s ancestors.

Tips for Adding a Person:
- For dates, you can use “About,” “Before,” or “After” with a year.
- If you need to enter names in Spanish, Portuguese, Cyrillic, or an Asian language, click Template, and select the language.

Add or Edit Information

Any user can add or edit information. Where possible, attach sources to verify the information. When you add or edit information, you can explain why it is correct.

1. To edit a person’s information, go to the person’s Details page (click the name, and then click Person).
2. On the person’s Details page, click the information, such as the name or date, and then on the right, click Edit. To add information, click the Add link.
3. To edit marriage information, in the Family Members section, click Edit Couple. You can add or edit marriage or divorce information for the couple.
4. To edit the relationship between parents and a child, hover the cursor over a child’s name, and click Edit Parents. Relationships can be adopted, biological, foster, guardianship, or step.

View Possible Duplicates and Merge Records

In Family Tree, sometimes a person has more than one record. These are called possible duplicates. You can merge the records into one record and keep the best information.

1. To check for possible duplicates, go to the person’s Details page (click the name, and then click Person).
2. On the right, click Possible Duplicates. You see information from the record you started from and from the Possible Duplicates.

3. Select Review Merge (if you think it may be a duplicate record), or Not a Match (if the records are not about the same person).

4. When you select Review Merge, the record you started from is on the left and the possible duplicate is on the right.

Important: When you are through, only the information on the left is kept.

5. Compare each piece of information, and decide which information you want to keep. If the information on the right side is more complete or accurate, click Replace or Add to move it to the left side. If the information on the right side is the same as or not as good as the information on the left side, click Reject.

6. When you are done, scroll to the bottom, and click the button to finish the merge.
