

How to Show Videos without an Internet Connection: Using an Android Device

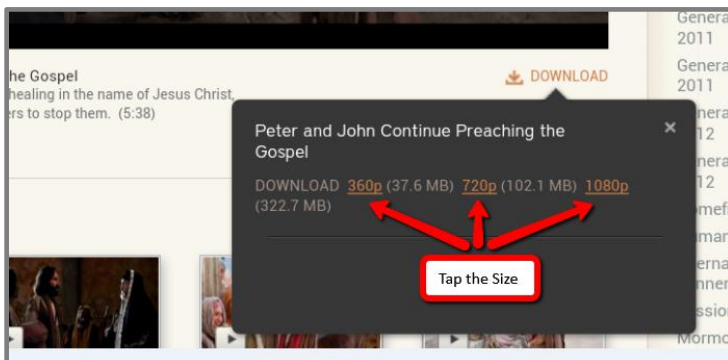

The Media Library has many videos you can play to help you teach gospel principles and enhance your gospel lessons. However, streaming the video over the meetinghouse's Internet connection is not always a possibility. To avoid potential problems with streaming, you can download the video ahead of time and then play it from a mobile device. However, please be aware there are a few videos in the Media Library that are not available for download. This is due to copyright and intellectual property laws. We are striving to make as many of these videos available for download as possible, but in the meantime, those few videos will require Internet access to play.

If you have an Android tablet or smartphone, you can download videos from the Media Library website. Here are the instructions for downloading and showing videos on an Android device:

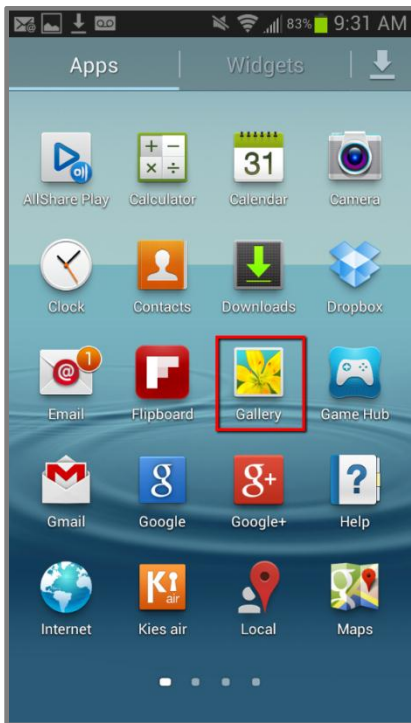

1. Using your Internet browser on your device, browse to the Media Library on LDS.org and find the video you would like to download. Tap on the Download link below the video.

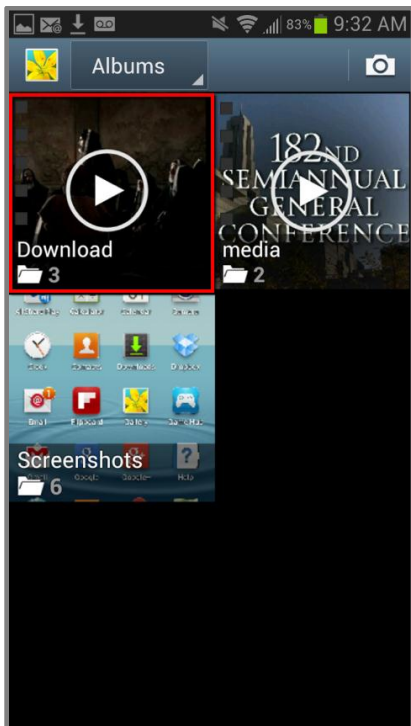

2. Tap on the size you would like to download. Larger files take longer to download, but the video quality is better. For mobile devices, we recommend the 360p or 720p size because the quality is sufficient and they take up less room on the device.

3. The video will automatically download. Navigate back to your home screen and open the Gallery app.

4. Open the Downloads album and find the video you downloaded.

5. Tap the video and the video will begin playing.
